OCTOBER COLORS.

BY W. D. HOWELLS

The year grows splendid!—On the mountain steep
Now lingers long the warm and gorgeous light,
Dying by slow degrees into the deep,
Delicious night.

The final triumph of the perfect year,
Rises the wood's magnificent array!
Beyond, the purple mountain heights appear,
And slope away.

The elm with musical, slow motion laves
His long, lithe branches in the tender air,
While from his top the Virgin's Bower waves
Her scarlet hair.

Where spring first hid her violets 'neath the fern—
His long, lithe fingers ope'd, fold after fold,
The odorless, wild rose's heart—now burn
The leaves of gold.

Now Nature pours her last and noblest wine!
Like some bacchant, beside the singing streams,
Reclines the enchanted day, wrapt in Divine,
Impassioned dreams.

The loveliest hill, the liveliest flowering herb,
His long, lithe fingers ope'd, fold after fold,
The odorless, wild rose's heart—now burn
The leaves of gold.

But where the painted leaves are falling fast,
Among the vales, beyond the farthest hill,
There sits a shadow, dim, and sad, and vast,
And lingers still.

And still we hear a voice among the hills,
A voice that mourns among the haunted woods
And with the mystery of its sorrow fills
The solitudes.

For while gay Autumn glides the fruit and leaf,
And doth her fairest garments wear,
Lo! Time forever in his nightly sheet
Binds up the year!

The mighty sheet which never is unbound!
The Reaper whom our souls beseech in vain!
The loved lost year that never may be found
Or loved again.

HOW I SAVED MY WIFE.

An Adventure in the Tropics.

BY JACKSON.

The sun was fast disappearing in a golden burst of transparent beauty, over the "Iron Hills" far away in the direction of that gay little watering place, "so well-known to many Americans," nestled amongst the hills in the interior of Cuba, as seated in the front of my quarters, a rickety and dilapidated old concern, which seemed to have stood the combined tornadoes of a century, enjoying my Havana, I gazed in admiration on the animated scene going on in the rich valley, in my immediate front; the negroes in their quaint and varied costumes singing merrily, as the tall and luscious sugar cane fell quickly before their sweeping and busy machetes, the echoes reverberating through the green and golden orange groves which skirted the hills, forming the boundaries of the most beautiful "ingenio" of which the Queen of the Antilles can boast.

"What a study for an artist," I remarked to the engineer, a tall raw-boned Scot, carried away by the overpowering beauties around.

"Ah, yes, man," he replied, smilingly, "and here comes something for the foreground," pointing as he spoke to a break in the cane not more than fifty yards from us, through which a negro mounted on a mule was coming like mad, throwing his arms wildly about and shouting furiously at his charger. Not halting until within a few feet of where we sat, he threw himself carelessly from the animal, and capering toward me, shouted, "a letter for you, sir." It was not until he had spoken twice or thrice that I was aroused from my reverie, and turning good naturedly to the poor fellow, inquired the trouble.

"A letter for you, sir," he said, at the same time unfolding a banana leaf into which he had carefully placed it, he handed me the document about which he seemed to be so proud.

"Thank you, Antonio," I said, tossing him a bit of money, "thank you."

The boy looked grateful, scratched his wool, and replacing his Sombrero, remounted, and was gone.

If the old adage, "coming events cast their shadows before," was ever verified, it was in this case, for immediately I took the missive from the negro, a presentment of something wrong took possession of me and though boasting of no ordinary amount of pluck, I could not master sufficient to open it.

What if my wife, whom I had left amongst strangers, one word from whom she could not understand, and visa versa, had been stricken with fever; what if she were dead; aye, and buried, for one follows the other quickly here. My thoughts were anything but happy, as quietly breaking the seal, I read the following:

"SIR: On receipt of this you will come quickly here; make no delay, as matters look serious."

The writer—probably some sympathizing foreigner who had called to see her, had been requested to write, had listened to her last words, had closed her eyes in death—to me was unknown. The thought was maddening. What was to be done?

"No train till nine to-morrow," said my friend, the Scotch engineer, in answer to my question, "and as for going to-night, you must not think of it; you would never reach there."

"I will go to Matanzas to-night," I replied, calmly, "should all the ladrones on the island be on the road."

"Ha, ha!" I shouted, "bring a horse, and be quick."

The negro was gone ere I ceased speaking, and soon returned, leading a hardy little pony, giving vent to his feelings by stating that, "Tobias Americanus es loco," a sentiment shared willingly by his companion, who assisted him in rigging my steed.

"Twilight was now upon us, and forty miles of as dangerous a road as was ever travelled by Dick Turpin, was before me. The engineer, after endeavoring to dissuade me from what he termed madness, entered his room, and soon returning placed in my hand his six-shooter, remarking, as he did so, 'you can depend on this, and don't be slow to use it; for if you reach Matanzas to-night not robbed or murdered, you are lucky, that's all.'"

With this reassuring speech I mounted, and waving my hand in adieu, disappeared through the brake. Night was fast closing over me as I entered the little village of Bermeja, about two leagues from my estate, and dismounting, I entered a cafe, with the proprietor of which I was acquainted, and having learned the route, and refreshed myself, I was soon again on my travels.

"The American looks wild," said the good-natured Spaniard, as he looked after me, "and I would rather him than I for the journey before him to-night."

"You are right, Juan," said his companion, a villainous looking specimen of humanity, who, from the moment I entered the cafe seemed anxious to learn if I were really going alone, and who rolled his eyes in holy horror when I foolishly told him I was—"You are right, for the murderous gang who robbed the Santa Rosa last night cannot be far off, and Maria may help him if they should be on his trail."

These remarks did not add to my happiness, but they gave me little concern, when compared to the delirious fancies which now had possession of my heated brain, as burying the rowels in my pony's sides I dashed madly along. My road for some miles lay along a beautiful valley, from the summit of the hills surrounding which, I was informed, I could see the Pan of Matanzas, a high cone-like hill, which I was enjoined to keep in view, as a kind of North Star, until I struck the Havana road, when, turning east, I was to follow such to the end of my journey.

It was near ten o'clock when I reached the top of the hill, and dismounting, I seated myself to wait the rising of the moon, the better to observe the road, and especially the mountain which was to be my guide. My pony was grazing a few feet from me; a thousand maddening thoughts were passing through my mind, when suddenly a sense of the solitary position I occupied led me to steel over me. What if I were attacked, aye, and murdered? Then I would think of the mysterious letter, and was all myself again. I had been seated half an hour when I fancied I could hear a slight noise. I listened attentively; in a few minutes I could distinctly hear the approach of horsemen as they came at a gallop up the side of the valley. Quick as thought I was alongside my pony, and drawing him into the tall shrubbery so as to conceal us both, I waited the approach of the strangers, determined to learn something of their character before scraping an acquaintance. That there was more than one it was now evident, and as they neared me they slackened their pace, their horses being apparently blown.

The moon was just peeping from beneath its bed, throwing a rich and sombre light on the most bewitching, fairy-like picture it were possible for eyes to look upon, made ten times more lovely by the stillness of night. As the horsemen, three in number, passed me at a walk, conversing hurriedly in a loud tone—

"You must have been mistaken, Panchito," said one, who, mounted on a white, well knitted pony, rode a little in advance.

"You must have been mistaken; no man is such a fool as to pass this road after sunset, alone, especially a stranger."

"No mistake," replied the other sharply, who did not seem to relish the doubt of his companion.

"Did you notice if he was armed," said the third party, turning around in his saddle, revealing features anything but prepossessing.

"I cannot say as to that," said the first addressed as Panchito, "but he appeared to be half crazy, or probably drunk."

"Let us push on," said the party on the white horse, "we will soon see, for he cannot be far ahead." And breaking into a smart canter, they were soon lost to my view.

My position was not to be envied, for it was evident those cut throats were upon my trail; not that I had anything worth stealing, but I had learned enough to convince me those gentry were not particular whether they killed you before or after robbing you. True, I could return to the village, but that would not only spoil my calculations, but would amount to something very like cowardice. Such were my thoughts, as tightening my girths, I sprang into the saddle and rode forward, my plan being to outdo them if possible, and if attacked, defend myself while I could, and having placed my revolver in a convenient position, I lighted a cigar and pressed forward, keeping a bright lookout for my knights of the road, though hoping piously I would not see them.

I had proceeded some distance, and was congratulating myself on my lucky escape, when coming to a turn of the road, through which a riuilet run, and over which it was necessary to walk, I looked forward, and directly in my front, about ten yards distant, stood my chieftain of the white charger.

Riding up quickly, he placed his horse alongside mine, and saluting me most blandly, asked for a light. Seeing he was alone, I returned his salute, and passed my lighted cigar, never for a moment taking my eyes off him. He was a muscular fellow, of medium height, dressed in the garb of a farmer, and wearing the long, straight sword of that class.

Having lighted, he passed me the cigar, and in a voice unnecessarily loud, of which I guessed the meaning, remarked:

"You are going to Matanzas?"

I replied, finishing the sentence for him—

"And as I am hurried, I must push on."

So saying, I drew my revolver, and gathering my pony under me, I flew past him. In an instant he was alongside me, and drawing a heavy horse pistol from his holsters, he shouted to halt.

Reining in as if to obey, he forged a little ahead, and taking deliberate aim, I fired, with a horrid groan, he threw up his arms and fell to the ground a corpse.

Not stopping a moment, for I could distinctly hear his companions making good time, I urged my pony forward at his utmost speed.

On they came, with a yell, on beholding their dead leader; on I went, also, at a breakneck pace, not caring whither, but still keeping the main road.

It was evident the chase would be short for they were nearing me at every stride, and swearing horribly.

I turned to fire, my horse shied, and losing my balance, I fell headlong to the ground.

In their haste they passed me unnoticed, and having caught my pony, came cantering back, swearing vengeance, to where I lay, bleeding and lacerated, my ankle broken, but still retaining my faculties and most of my strength, thinking I was at their mercy, for I lay motionless.

They rode up to within a few paces of me; the nearest advanced, uttering the most fearful oaths. When close enough, I arose quickly on one knee, and, taking deliberate aim, I fired; the ball passing through his forehead, he dropped without a groan.

My companion, with more pluck than could possibly serve him, under the circumstances, having fastened the horses to a tree, drew his hanger, and with a fearful oath rushed at me. Covering him as he advanced, I waited, to make a sure thing, until he was close on me; I then fired. With the quickness of lightning he ducked, and ere I could meet him again he was upon me, dealing a severe blow, which I received on my left arm, partially disabling it. I sprang at him, and grasping his legs, tore him to the ground, when a dreadful struggle now commenced.

Under any other circumstances his chances would have been small, indeed; but cut, bruised, with my foot broken and face lacerated from the fall, I was in a sorrowful plight to fight for my life; still, he had hard work before him, and had I not lost my pistol in the scuffle, mine would have been easy.

war about to finish yet; so fetchin' him a lug wi' a piece o' stunsailyard, wot I carried along fur a walkin' stick, we tied him wi' a hammock lashin', and brought you an' him down a bit the road, and findin' this ere hut, we busted the door in, on 'here we are."

"We wouldn't have yer, Cap'n," continued the sailor, "fearin' he might git loose, an' about two hours ago those sogers cum an' put them darbies on, so you see," chorused his companions, "we be in a blasted fix."

We were all brought to Matanzas, six miles distant, prisoners; when, having explained matters to the officials satisfaction, we were complimented for our pluck, and I was sent to my lodgings, at the city's expense, where I found my wife, who, a few hours before, was given up as hopeless, and in the very jaws of death, now able to sit up.

Having, a short time previous, been told of my adventure, she became suddenly better, the excitement having completely broken the fever, which, otherwise, would certainly have proved fatal. In a few days she was quite recovered, and never ceases now to attribute her miraculous preservation to the pounding I got from the brigands.

The bodies of the robbers were brought to town and identified as being, when living, the most relentless and cruel murderers.

I received the reward, which I was happy to share with my preservers, who, with two hundred and fifty each in their pockets, sailed for home in the next steamer.

In the ruffian with whom I had the death struggle, who was the cause of all the trouble, and who was garroted soon after, I easily recognized the pious man, who so fervently prayed to the virgin for my protection at the village on the eve of my first adventure in the tropics.

The hearse was decorated in front by branches of laurel and evergreens, and was followed by the coffin, borne upon the shoulders of four men, covered with a beautiful pall and surrounded by wreaths of laurel and evergreens.

The Middletown Transcript.

MIDDLETOWN, DEL.

SATURDAY MORNING, OCTOBER 30, 1869.

SCOUNDREL EXPOSED.—Rev. A. R. Rittonhouse, of Smyrna, Del. has done the community a service for which he deserves its thanks. He has been at some pains to investigate and expose the imposition practiced upon the public by a certain Rev. Edward A. Wilson, who represents that he was cured of consumption in a few weeks by a very simple remedy, and being "anxious to make known to his fellow sufferers the means of cure" he offers to send the prescription, to all who desire it, free of charge. Circulars which accompany this prescription, represent that the formula is that of Dr. Churchill, of Paris, a physician who was gaining a high reputation from his cures of consumption by the use of his preparations of the Extract of Blodgett's in combination with the Hypophosphites of Lime. Now, it appears that Blodgett's is unknown to pharmacy, and is a swindle. Of course, no druggist can put up the prescription; consequently, it has to be put up by Rev. Edward A. Wilson, Williamsburg, Kings county, N. Y. who charges for it whatever price he pleases; and here is the source of his profit and the secret of his benevolent desire to "benefit the afflicted." His advertisement has been published for years, in nearly all the papers of this country, and he has doubtless accumulated thousands of dollars through this means. We published it some years ago, but becoming satisfied that it was a scheme to swindle the public, we have steadily refused to publish it ever since. The card of Wilson, headed "To Consumptives," the card of Ogden, headed "Errors of Youth," the Howard Association, the Lock Hospital, and all such publications, have for years been excluded from our columns, though frequently urged to insert them, because we believed them to be improper publications, and would not make ourselves accessories in swindling the suffering and unfortunate.

"On all hands we are again hearing complaints of dull times. The West is not sending on its grain as freely as was expected, and many of its debts here still need liquidation in consequence. As yet there are scarcely any signs of the Christmas and New Year's trade which in certain lines of business usually begins to be visible about this time."

The Dry Goods Reporter says:—"The unusually large number of stores and dwellings for rent and for sale in New York city at the present time indicates a transition period in real estate. It was formerly a difficult matter to obtain a store in Broadway, and persons had to wait months for a vacancy; but at present there is scarcely a block below Canal street that does not contain one or more stores for rent. It is nearly the same in the side streets off Broadway. Some of the large business blocks, constructed under such promising auspices, have failed to realize the anticipations of their owners, who have been obliged to make considerable concessions to tenants. Some large stores, that formerly brought $42,000 a year, can now be obtained for $25,000, with but few takers. The reduction has not been so heavy in the case of the smaller class of stores, but in these the tendency is decidedly downward. In the Bowery, on the business avenues, and in the sister city of Brooklyn, there are now more stores to be rented than at any period since the crisis of 1857."

THE EVILS OF OUR FINANCIAL SYSTEM.—Appreciation of the evils of our system of two currencies, regulated by the general government, is shown in an article on "The Incredible Power of the American Chancellor of the Exchequer," published in the London Economist, suggested by the recent panics in New York in the stock and gold markets. After asserting that the English nation would deem it most extraordinary and most pernicious if Mr. Robert Lowe, the Chancellor of the Exchequer, could excite or ruin the speculations in London, the Economist contends that Mr. Boutwell, under the greenback system, has the power to make the price of gold what he pleases, as well as the rate of interest. The Economist argues as follows: "The large daily receipts of the customs are paid in gold, and if that gold is kept in the treasury and not sold, the price of gold can be raised as high as the government likes. Again, if the government first accumulate a large stock of gold, and then sell it for greenbacks, it can raise the rate of interest as high as it wishes. There is no money at New York but 'greenbacks,' and by selling gold, and keeping the paper paid for that gold, money can be made scarce at will. The government is not now going to do so; but they are going to sell gold and buy bonds with the money; but they could do it, and it is the most extraordinary power ever conferred on any government. No finance minister in Europe ever was the financial despot that Mr. Boutwell is in America." This is certainly one of the great evils of our system, but only one of them. There are others equally as bad; among them the fact that the national banks are an exclusive institution with immense special privileges, and no requirement to redeem their issues in real money.

The great event of the week is the decision of the U. S. Supreme Court on Monday last in the Yorger case, in favor of tobacco crops. Radicals in Washington are said to regard it as a fatal blow to the reconstruction acts of Congress.

EXCITEMENT AT DOVER AND CLAYTON.

Claimants of the land whereon stand the towns of Dover and Clayton, have presented themselves in those places, it is said, and are about to institute legal proceedings to recover their claims. In reference to Clayton, it is said, that some years ago Richard Tibbett held possession of 100 acres whereon that town now stands. About eight years ago, Richard Tibbett, at an advanced age, died, and his financial affairs not being left in a satisfactory condition, his land was disposed of at Sheriff's sale, Dr. Wm. Daniels, of Smyrna, and Mason Bailey, of Kenton, becoming the joint purchasers. They wisely made the most of their bargain—built houses, sold lots, &c. and Clayton grew into importance.

The Herald says:—"About three years ago, a claimant to be Richard Tibbett's brother, arrived in the vicinity, and stated that the land having been entailed by his father to Richard, during his life, and at his death, to him, he was the rightful owner, and commenced, or was about to commence a suit for the land. In a short time, however, the claimer brother seemed to have got a 'fix' in his car," and suddenly disappeared; whether he went down in a cave, or up in a balloon, we have never been able to ascertain, and whether he disappeared by fair play or foul-play, the oldest inhabitant has never informed us.

"And now comes on John Whortensby, hailing from the far-off State of California, and claiming to be the nephew and legal heir of the aforesaid Richard. This last claimant, evidently means business, having caused to be served upon the tenant, Mr. Gillmore, a writ of ejectment to try and determine the title.

We understand that Daniels and Bailey, the owners, or holders of the farm, are very much agitated in regard to the matter, while parties who have purchased lots from the different holders and made improvements thereon, are all astir, and we learn a meeting is soon to be held to raise a fund to resist the claiming of the man from the Golden State.

The present owners of the land hold that Hon. N. B. Smithers, some years ago, drew a deed for this same land from Richard Tibbett to Isaac Hazell, and that Hazell deeded back to Tibbett, all of which was done with a view to break or cut the entailment, and that when the late Chancellor Harrington, President of the Delaware Railroad, procured depot grounds from Tibbett, examined the title and was satisfied with it.

On the other hand, Hons. T. F. Bayard and W. G. Whately are Mr. Whortensby's counsel. "When Doctors disagree who shall decide?"

The foregoing reminds us that a number of years back a lady made her appearance in Easton, Md. and set up a claim to the lands there, and the improvements thereon. Much excitement grew out of it for a time. Her claim was made, if we recollect rightly, as heir of the Lord Proprietary. A town meeting was called and the question discussed by the late Hon. Robert Henry Goldsborough, John Leeds Kerr and William Hayard, Esqs. the two latter gentlemen leading members of the Talbot bar. The groundless character of the claim was fully exposed, and so the matter ended. Whether the Claytonians and Doverians will fare so well, remains to be seen.

Ex-President Andrew Johnson has been defeated in the Tennessee Legislature for U. S. Senator. It is asserted that he was jockeyed out of the election by a political trick, Cooper's name having been withdrawn on the day before as a ruse to test Johnson's full strength, the Stokes men agreed to join in a vote for Mr. Cooper if Etheridge would withdraw and make Johnson's defeat certain. As a compromise man he was enabled to poll the required votes on the first ballot, and beat the ex-President by four votes. Mr. Johnson may yet be elected, should Brownlow die.

Business men, of this town, are informed that they can get colored posters printed at this office, as well as they can get them at Black Horse Alley, or any other place in Philadelphia. If they go to the city to get their work done, can they complain if others go to the city for their supplies. To encourage home trade is a better plan. A word to the wise is sufficient.

VIRGINIA U. S. SENATORS.—Lieutenant Governor John F. Lewis and Judge John W. Johnson have been elected U. S. Senators from Virginia by the Legislature of that state. Both Senators are said to be able to take the ironclad oath.

We incontinently raise our hat and make our profoundest salam to our correspondent "Apis," for the compliment which he pays to the TRANSCRIPT.

Henry Ward Beecher has delivered himself of a stirring protest against the neglect of the Confederate dead at Gettysburg by the government and Northern people. He went over the battle-field recently, and was shocked at the exposed remains and robbery of the shallow graves and trenches in which the poor Southern slain were not decently buried, and whose proper reinterment has never been cared for since, while with the Union dead the contrary has been the case. He refers to the fact that "We disburden the gibbet tenderly and give sepulture to murderers," and asks, "Can it be possible that a great and generous nation will much longer suffer the Confederate dead to lie disburdened in such utter and contemptuous neglect?"

LOCAL AFFAIRS.

By invitation of one of the Trustees of the Poor, we dined at the Arms House, on Tuesday, in company with the Trustees, the Grand Jury, and several invited guests. The dinner served by Superintendent Mr. Isaac Crouch, and the ladies of his family, was such as might have tempted the palate of an epicure. After dinner the guests, Trustees, and Grand Jury assembled together, and were introduced to Miss Dix, who made some valuable suggestions as to the proper care and provision for the insane. Her remarks were listened to with respectful attention, and when she closed a vote of thanks was unanimously passed by the board of Trustees for the lively interest she had everywhere manifested in the welfare of the unfortunate. Her suggestions embraced the erection of a separate building for the insane, well heated by steam and thoroughly ventilated, with ample grounds for recreation and exercise. The separation of the sexes was recommended, and the supervision of an experienced resident physician in the establishment. Moderate labor and employment, and every attention to comfort, with sane male and female attendants in each and every branch of industry, and in every department. She recommended economy in all things, but not parsimony. Everything for comfort and convenience, but nothing for show or ornamentation, or, at least, to make that a secondary consideration.

REGISTER OF WILLS APPROVED.—Gov. Salisbury has appointed Benjamin Gibbs, Esq., of Appoquinimink Hundred, Register of Wills in and for New Castle County, vice Robert C. Fraim, Esq., whose term has expired. The Delaware Republican pays the following tribute to the new appointee and also to the retiring officer: "Mr. Gibbs, entered upon his duties the present week, and as he is polite and gentlemanly, and possessed of good abilities, we have no doubt that he will make an efficient and popular officer. Mr. Gibbs, who with him in retiring from office the esteem and respect of all. The citizens of this county have been favored by the appointment of efficient and popular men to this office, for many years back, and we feel that there will not be a deficit of civility and ability in the future. Mr. Gibbs has the good fortune to be his successor. Mr. G. was in early life an earnest Whig, and in 1852 was elected to the Constitutional Convention over Mr. Samuel Townsend, but for some reason he joined the Democrats a few years afterwards, and has continued to be an active member of that party. We understand that Mr. Fraim intends to become a resident of our city, and engage as an agent for the Delaware Life Insurance Company.

We dropped in on Wm. M. Kennard, No. 303-A Market street, Wilmington, Del. on Wednesday last, and found him and his corps of active and efficient clerks, as busy as they could be, and a crowd of customers thronging the store. Kennard understands the true principle of driving a successful trade. Few men advertise so extensively or more successfully. He isn't afraid of using printer's ink, and through the press he ever keeps a standing invitation to the public to examine his goods at his low and fair prices, and he is most assiduous in his efforts to satisfy. No wonder we always find his store thronged with customers whenever we enter it.

They have a Library and a Lyceum, and public debates, in Smyrna. What shall we have similar institutions here? How pleasant, how profitable, to employ the long winter evenings in these intellectual exercises, where the attraction of mutual improvement is so strong, and where all classes and all ages can participate in them. A Lyceum and a Library were two of the objects contemplated and hoped for in the erection of our Town Hall. Who will confer a lasting honor upon himself, and a substantial benefit upon his community, by leading the way in founding a valuable Public Library here? It is an object worthy of princely munificence.

THE DELAWARE MUTUAL LIFE INSURANCE COMPANY. While attending the State Fair, at Westminister, Carroll co., Md. a week or two ago, we were called on by a gentleman who had just effected a policy of insurance for $5,000 in the above company, and questioned as to its character and reliability. We replied that we believed it to be good, and instanced the fact that it had ever been prompt and reliable in its dealings with us; and the answer was deemed satisfactory, though we had no other means of testing this opinion. We learn it is doing a large business in western Maryland.

Mr. John W. Jolls, ticket agent at the Middletown Station, for some years past, voluntarily retired from that position, on Monday next, and resumes his former position with Mr. E. T. Evans. Mr. John Vasey becomes his successor. Mr. Jolls has been a very faithful, efficient, and acceptable officer, both to the Company and the public. We hope that Mr. Vasey may be able to give equal satisfaction.

FAILED.—The champion long distance pedestrian, Young Miles, who began his feat of walking 105 consecutive hours without sleep, for a purse of $300, on Tuesday last at 2 o'clock, at Chadwell's, in W. 4th street, in the city of New York, on Tuesday, in search of Chadwell. They were over extreme fatigue and physical exhaustion, on Saturday evening, at 20 minutes past 8 o'clock, failing to accomplish the task by 2 hours and 40 minutes only.—Del. Gazette.

Rev. James H. Lighthorn, of Dover, lectured to a crowded and cheering throng at the Town Hall, on Tuesday night, on Temperance. The newly-formed glee club rendered some of their finest temperance songs, and the Band of Hope went through their catechetical exercises. Rev. John Chambers and John B. Gough, are expected here, during the fall.

The 15th of October is rather early for ice in this latitude, yet the ponds were frozen over on the morning of that day, and nearly every day since. Many persons are in the habit of going out on the ice, but predictions are idle. A cold October is often succeeded by a bland Indian Summer, in November.

NETTING.—A party of ladies and gentlemen from this town, drove over to Middle Neck, Cecil county, Md. on Tuesday, in search of Chert. They were quite successful, and many jokes as well as nuts were cracked, and one gentleman of the party was near cracking himself by a fall.

A wedding last week, and two more this week, one at St. Ann's and one at Forest Church, Middletown, have served to break the monotony of life here, for some days past. Whose turn next? Ah! we can't answer that question; but, we shall see.

CLAYTON.—John Whortensby, of California, has raised a row at Clayton, by claiming to be the nephew and heir of Richard Tibbett. He has engaged the services of Hon. T. F. Bayard and W. G. Whately. So says the Clayton Herald.

Caleb Smithers, Esq., a prominent citizen of that county, died at his residence in Frederica, on Thursday week in the 73rd year of his age. The deceased was widely and favorably known throughout the State.

Over 400 baskets of peaches were shipped from Maryland on Wednesday 13th inst. A large quantity for so late in the season.

DEATH OF COL. LEMUEL ROBERTS.—On Wednesday the 20th inst. as Col. Roberts was proceeding home from Crumpton, Queen Anne's county, Md. he was seized with sudden illness, and in attempting to get out of his carriage, fell to the ground, sustaining some injury, his horse passing on with the carriage. Two friends, recognizing the horse, went in search of Col. R. and found him lying in the road opposite Pondtown school house. He was conveyed to his home and expired next day. Col. Roberts had long been identified with the public affairs of the county and State, having represented the county a number of times in the State Legislature, held the offices of Register of Wills, Lottery Commissioner, and Commissioner of Public Works. He was an urbane and genial gentleman, and his loss will be deeply felt.

West Virginia elected a State Legislature Thursday. The returns are very meagre, but are said to indicate Democratic gains.

REVOLUTIONARY FRANCE.

There is a great political excitement throughout a large portion of the Empire of France. The Emperor has lost his prestige. The change which is now making from a system of personal government to one of ministerial responsibility has let loose all the elements of disorder. The manifesto of one hundred and sixteen members of the Corps Legislatif, joined to the result of the elections, forced upon the Government various measures of reform, which extend the liberty of the people to the verge of license. But the Emperor unwisely refused to convoke the Legislative Assembly for the 26th of October, which was the time originally set for the opening of the session. Forty of the newly elected members, all of them bitter and intensely vindictive ultra radicals, have taken the name of "Irreconcilables," and have openly declared their intention to overturn the Empire and set up a Republic in its stead. They denounce the order of the Corps Legislatif until the 29th of November. Under the leadership of M. Raspail, thirteen of them—the remaining twenty-seven holding aloof—determined to assemble on Tuesday last, and demand the right to organize in Legislative session. If they carried this intention into effect, it was feared that serious trouble would ensue. All Paris, for several weeks past, has been in a state of agitation. The gravity of the political question was of itself a sufficient cause for anxiety, but this was increased by the strikes for higher wages that have taken place there. Nine thousand clerks have quit their places, their places of employment. The journeymen gilders of that city are also on a strike. Riots have occurred among the miners at St. Aubin, which were not quelled until the military was called out and sixteen persons killed and twenty wounded. At the Folles Belleville a number of Radicals have been brought into collision with the police, and were not dispersed until several were wounded. On this occasion, benches were torn up, and arm chairs smashed turned into weapons and projectiles. Other bodies of workmen have been tampered with, and it was feared that the determination of the "Irreconcilables" to proceed in a body to the Legislative Chamber, in accordance with the programme of action they had laid down for themselves, would bring matters to a climax.

The Government was not idle. It at once, took extraordinary measures to put down by the strong hand a popular uprising. Large bodies of troops have been concentrated at or near Paris. Marshal Bazaine has been appointed Commander of the Imperial Guard, and rumors were current that if any attempt at revolution was made, orders had been issued to mow down the insurgents with artillery. These vigorous proceedings indicate the extent to which the revolutionary spirit prevails at this time in France, and the determination of the Government to put it down at all hazards. The bold attitude thus assumed has had its effect. There was no disturbance, and, so far as we have yet learned, no seditions cries. All through the day Paris was perfectly tranquil, and in the evening the Emperor drove through the principal streets in an open carriage to give confidence to the timid by proving to them that he has confidence in himself.

Nevertheless, the end is not yet. His fate, as well as that of his dynasty, depends on the ultimate result of the conflict still pending between him and the "Irreconcilables." They refuse, point blank, to recognize the Empire to which, as members of the Corps Legislatif, they are obliged to swear allegiance; and they are bending all their efforts to bring about the overthrow of what they call "Napoleonism." In this they have the support of the populace of all the large cities throughout France. The proscribed of the Coup d'Etat are working with them. Victor Hugo, Ledru Rollin, implicated long since in the attempt to assassinate the Emperor; Louis Blanc, Garnier Pages, Jules Favre, Barbes, Raspail, and a host of other names more or less intimately connected with the short-lived Republic of 1848, have entered heartily into the movement to precipitate a revolution. The time is not ill-chosen. Never has the Emperor Napoleon been less popular in France than now. Even in the Provinces his former adherents are turning against him. He stands, as it were, almost isolated in the midst of a surging multitude of enemies, whose sole object is to rid themselves alike of him and of the Empire he has attempted to re-establish and consolidate. But whilst these people have combined together to overthrow the existing Government, they entertain discordant ideas, and not being able to agree among themselves, have no better Government to suggest.—Baltimore Gazette.

MARRIAGE IN HIGH LIFE.—Bishop Simpson's daughter was married in Spring Garden Methodist Church, Philadelphia, on Wednesday. The wedding was a grand affair, and the struggle to get into the church by those who held tickets and those who had none was quite equal to that which takes place at one of the theatres of the same city on the occasion of the appearance of a great actor. Mr. and Mrs. Grant were the guests. The donations to the bride were many and costly. The bridegroom's name is Weaver. He and his bride started the next day for southern Italy, where he holds an appointment of Consul.

The steamer Stonewall was burned on the Mississippi river, about forty-five miles above Cairo, Ill. early Thursday morning, and of 250 persons on board, only 32 are known to be saved. The disaster was caused by a pile of hay catching fire from a candle, by the light of which some deck passengers were playing cards. The vessel was valued at $45,000, and had on board 800 tons of freight, including 290 horses and mules.

Gov. Bowie has recommended Thursday the 18th day of November next, as a day of thanksgiving and praise to Almighty God for the bounteous blessings bestowed upon the land during the last year. The day is the same as that designated by the President.

LETTER FROM KENT COUNTY, MD.

Correspondence of the Middletown Transcript.

"Sinapis"—Politics—Managing—Changes proposed—The Democracy proper all right—Chertown—Improvements—New Church—School matters—The Transcript, &c.

KENT COUNTY, MD. Oct. '69.

Mr. Editor:—I suppose there must be an end to all good things, and judging from the absence of letters for so long a time from your spicy correspondent "Sinapis," that an end has come to his contributions, and finding none disposed to keep you posted of the current of affairs in old Kent, I venture to send you this.

There can be no mistake as to the truth of the home thrusts made by your former correspondent from this county, as the squirming and wriggling of certain influential parties in and about our county town most amply demonstrated. At present the political caldron is seething and bubbling with excitement of faction. The town interest, known familiarly as the "Court House Clique" headed and controlled, almost altogether by old Whigs, under the guise of conservatives, had, it seems, predetermined to put into the Legislature and Sheriffally certain adulterated democrats in preference to old genuine life long democrats. For once, however, the clique were fairly defeated. Their candidate for the Sheriffally was badly beaten, and only one of their conservative nominees is nominated for the Legislature. The true democrats of the county rallied and drove the motley town party to the wall. It is understood that they will submit with what grace they can, and support the ticket nominated, yet it is whispered that in future there are to be no more primary meetings and nominating Conventions, but the field is to be open, and a kind of scrub race instituted, free to all. New light is certainly dawning on the Solons of party. Another great change is talked of in regard to the distribution of spoils. At present there are five persons, one for each Election District, appointed by the County Commissioners to collect the Taxes, which they impose. It is a profitable job, and never goes begging. Long before the time for the appointment to be made, the Commissioners are besieged, and entreated, coaxed, cajoled, wheedled and threatened by the candidates, who all have special claims. The Commissioners are mortal men, and must do something to pacify, if not to satisfy, these clamors. One thing is easy to be done. They can promise, and they do. One has, it is said, promised five different men the Collectorship of one District; in another there are about twenty candidates, all relying upon these promises, and probably paying less attention in consequence to their private affairs. To prevent the corruption and intrigue growing out of this practice it is proposed to memorialize the Legislature to make the Collector or Collectors eligible by the people. I say Collector or Collectors, for it is not yet definitely settled whether to consolidate all these crumbs into a loaf, or to allow them to remain as they are. One thing is very evident, five partisans can do more than one to promote and secure party success.

Chertown is looking up. On the principal thoroughfare, the Broadway of ye ancient burg, new and fresh looking houses are rapidly taking the places of the dingy old tar-harbars of the past; still a few of the latter stand, probably that the past may not be wholly ignored or entirely forgotten. The people are piously inclined, read their Bibles, and remember that "Jeshurun waxed fat and kicked." It would not do to reach unexampled prosperity at a single bound.

Among the improvements that are to be, a new Methodist Episcopal Church is talked of. It will occupy a vacant lot in the rear of the residence of the late lamented Judge Eccleston, and in front of the tasteful domicile of the Hon. George Vickers. No more eligible site could be selected in the precincts of the town. High, airy and dry, it will be easy of access to the whole population. I learn that an estimable and modest citizen will present the lot, together with a donation in cash of One Thousand Dollars, besides paying a very liberal price for the old church, now standing in front of the Vossell House. Surely now the citizens should see to it that the new structure shall be a credit both to the town and the principles of Methodism and Christianity. Besides, the completion of this improvement will abate a public nuisance by filling up an unsightly chasm on the principal street of the town.

At the approaching election a new Board of School Commissioners are to be elected, the first under the new School Law; the present Board having been appointed by the County Commissioners to serve until a regular election. It is not deemed an office of great honor or profit, and is important (in a party sense) only as it involves the appointment of a Secretary, Treasurer and Examiner, a trinity of official dignity and capacity in one man.

There lies the plum, and several fingers are ready to pick it out. Among the candidates named I hear of your esteemed contemporary who presides in the sanctuary of the Chertown Transcript. As he is not considered a friend of the O. H. clique he is supposed to have the inside track. The present incumbent, who is also Deputy Clerk of the County, surveyor and horticulturalist will probably be a competitor. Being supposed to be in the clique, and having so many irons in the fire will no doubt militate against his chances, still, as he will be backed by powerful influences, the Editor should look to his priming. I have no doubt that others will press their claims for the position. In the mean time the friends of the rivals are secretly mining and countermining.

I should like to speak of our Rail Road prospects, but my letter is growing too long to introduce a subject of such importance, and I must reserve it for a future occasion. In the mean time indulge me in a word about your paper, which I often see and read with pleasure. Can any one fail to read it with satisfaction and profit? It is possibly not faultless, but I am not acquainted with the hebdomad that equals it in freshness—in the judgment displayed in its selections, in the interest of its correspondence, and the genial, cheery spirit that pervades it. A long and successful career to it is my hearty wish.

Yours, APL.

ITEMS OF NEWS.

The Treasury Department is just now exercised over the fact that it has received over ninety thousand dollars' worth of counterfeit bonds. These bonds were stricken off from the plates in government possession. How many thousands millions there may be in the hands of the people, bought and paid for as genuine, no one can say. Evidently our Treasury Department has been a pretty costly and loosely managed concern, and is likely to remain so.

This fine bird is becoming very scarce, and the provision of the Legislature to protect them is a wise one."

De Soto, when he visited the shores of America, sought long and ardently for the "Spring of perpetual youth," that those who bathed therein might never grow old in appearance. People of our day have in part discovered a substitute for this unfound spring in Ring's Vegetable Ambrosia, a few applications of which gives to the hair a glossy, wavy, and healthy appearance peculiar to youthful beauty. If any of our readers doubt this, let them try a bottle, and be convinced of the truth of our assertion.

DEATH OF LORD DERBY.—The cable dispatches announce the news of the death of Lord Derby, and was not unexpected, as he had been seriously ill for some weeks, and was not expected to live. Lord Derby has occupied too large and prominent a place in British history to be passed by without some special reference to the leading events of his political life. He was born in 1799, was elected to Parliament in 1821, and three years afterwards began his official career as Under Secretary for the Colonies. Lord Grey subsequently appointed him Chief Secretary for Ireland. He was prominent during the great reform agitation in 1832-33-34. In 1841 he accepted the seals of the colonial office, and was made a member of the House of Peers in 1844 by the title of Baron Stanley of Bickerstaffe. In 1851 Lord Stanley succeeded his father as fourteenth Earl of Derby, and in February, 1852, was offered and accepted the position of Premier. In 1860, on the fall of Lord John Russell's second administration, Lord Derby formed his third cabinet, which lasted till 1868. Lord Derby was a scholar as well as a statesman, and published a translation of Homer's Iliad in 1865, which has gone through six editions and is a remarkably able and scholarly production.

DEATH OF HON. TRAGLE TOWNSEND.—Hon Tragle Townsend died very suddenly on Saturday morning last. He was returning from Baltimore on the steamer Cambridge, which runs to New York, Maryland, and died just about the time the steamer landed at the wharf. His remains were conveyed to his residence near Snow Hill, Worcester county, for interment. Mr. Townsend had attained to a ripe old age. During his lifetime he had filled various public positions to which he had been elected by the people of his county.

The sparrows imported into Philadelphia have all flown away.

THE undersigned offers, at private sale, that valuable Farm known as "CHOPTANK," containing 300 Acres, More or Less,
Situated within two miles of Middletown, and only about one mile from Armstrong's Station on the Delaware Railroad, thus having the advantage of two convenient Rail Road stations. The land is in a fine state of cultivation, nearly all arable, but having wood enough on it for the uses of the farm. It is divided into six fields, with water in each field, and is susceptible of division into two farms nearly equal in size. The whole has been limed over once, and a part of it twice, and it is unsurpassed as a fruit or trucking farm. The enclosures are of good chestnut post and rail fence and osage hedge. The buildings are all in complete order.
The DWELLING is a two-story frame, containing seven rooms, and there is a pump of excellent water at the door. The Barn, Stables, and other out-buildings, ample for the uses of the farm, and there are two Tenant Houses, one of which is new.

RINGS VEGETABLE AMBROSIA.
This Ringed Vegetable has been before the public long enough to have been thoroughly tested and its increasing sale and popularity are the best evidence of its superior merit. As a dressing for the hair, it is unequalled at color it has no equal. For curing humors of the scalp and preventing itching it is wonderfully successful. For preventing the hair from falling out it is unequalled. For restoring hair to bald heads it succeeds beyond competition, although not always successful. Where the hair is thin or falling out, it is a sure remedy. As a dressing nothing surpasses it. It imparts to the hair a soft and wavy hair that beautiful glossy appearance so much admired. Containing no oil or grease it does not soil the finest linen. It is compounded upon scientific principles of the purest ingredients and is entirely harmless. Being performed with the most fragrant extracts its odor is delightful. Testimonials almost without number can be given if necessary but the AMBROSIA is too well known to require it. Best once and you will never do without it.
